What exactly can I expect when I bring my senior to Life. Documented for a senior interview?

You should try and show up about 15 minutes prior to your appointment. When you arrive, your interviewer will introduce him- or herself to you and your senior. After this, you will be guided into the studio.

Your senior will be seated. At this time, lights, sound levels, and white balance will be adjusted accordingly. The interview will begin shortly and last about thirty to forty-five minutes, depending on how much you senior has to say.

I want my senior to look his/her best. Do you have any advice?

Your senior will be interviewed on a black backdrop, so having him or her wear colors that contrast with black is a good idea (floating heads are bad). Also, try to avoid having him or her wear clothing that is noisy. This will be picked up on the microphone. One last thing. Skin, by its very nature, is oily. Studio lighting may cast a sheen on your senior's face that is unwanted. Powdering before the interview will help mitigate this.

I want my senior to do his/her best while interviewing. Do you have any suggestions?

The best thing you can do is have your senior help pick the questions and have him or her review and reflect on them prior to the interview.

Do I really have to show up with my senior? After all, he/she can drive.

If your senior is age seventeen or younger, the answer is yes. A parent must be in the room as the interview takes place. It is ased that young children be left at home for the senior interview. If your senior is age eighteen or older then there is no reason for you to be in attendance.
